F-Spot is a great free photo application that comes built in to Ubuntu. Although it doesn't support RAW format images (yet), it can open most standard RAW image formats and some other image file formats. Image editors Which one do you use? Most images can be converted easily to multiple formats so that you can work on them no matter what your computer or device is. This is no less true of digital cameras than it is of the computer that contains the photos on your hard drive. So, it's really up to you whether you convert the images to your preferred image format on a device-by-device basis or save them in their native format. In both cases, you can import the images into a viewer or editor to work on them further. One of the easiest ways to convert files is with Gwenview. Gwenview is the default image browser in Ubuntu 10.10. You can also edit images directly in Gwenview. Go to Edit ⇒ Edit In and select any one of the image editors available. You can then play with the images in whatever way you want, or you can export the images to many other formats (see the upcoming section, "Exporting your images."). Figure 19-2 shows an example image in Gwenview. Figure 19-2: Use Gwenview to edit photos in the Free Libre Software (FLOSS) world. Exporting your images Imagine a scenario where someone sends a JPEG-format image to you over the Internet or gives you a CD with the image already in the JPEG format. With it, you can import the image and use it, but you can't easily export it. What's more, you don't know the best way to export it to a format that you can import into your computer — for example, a format compatible with Lightroom, a program for organizing and editing images that you may use for fine-tuning the final images. What you need is the ability to create a file format yourself. Some programs can convert an image to a variety of other formats. However, converting an image isn't always a good idea. Some formats have drawbacks that make them unsuitable for the conversion, and the conversion process often flattens the original file. You can also take a photo and create a photo album in LibreOffice Writer or in e-mail. However, there are many problems with the photo album, which uses a template. An album created using an [Lipomatous hypertrophy of the atrium in nivolumab therapy: a case report]. A 64-year-old male with lung adenocarcinoma was started on nivolumab as second-line chemotherapy. One month later, the patient had a case of atrial enlargement during outpatient follow-up. The echocardiographic findings revealed a tumor-like lesion in the interatrial septum, and the transthoracic echocardiogram did not show intracavitary tumor. He also had brain metastases, but the brain MRI showed no abnormality. Therefore, the patient was diagnosed as having cardiac tumor with a primary tumor in the lung and brain metastasis. An endomyocardial biopsy and histopathological examination of the lesion confirmed cardiac lipomatous hypertrophy. Despite negative findings, chemotherapy for the primary lung lesion was initiated, but no viable tumor cells were detected in the tumor. We report here the first case of cardiac lipomatous hypertrophy after nivolumab therapy.Q: Simple Collect::SumMere Function I would like to write a function in R that collect the sum of the values in a data frame, such that df Q: Vue - Axios get request not working I am trying to make a get request to retrieve a data set from a local JSON file. The invention relates to a device for determining the quality of an automotive fuel, this device is particularly suited for determining the quality of a gasoline and Diesel fuel. It is known that for vehicles that have an engine, such as motor vehicles, the quality of the fuel injected into the engine and consumed by it is critical to the operation of the engine and the performance of the vehicle, and hence to the operating safety of the driver. One of the parameters for evaluating the quality of the fuel is the amount of "unburned" hydrocarbons (HC) in the fuel. There are many methods used to determine the concentration of unburned HC, e.g. measuring the smell emitted from the fuel, or various analytical measurements such as measurement of the refraction index of the fuel, or measurement of its carbon content, or of its oxidation indicators. Many methods are currently employed, but the measuring device is not very widely used, because they are expensive, complex and difficult to use. A simple measuring system that is currently sold in the market for evaluating the quality of a Diesel fuel is the Romblens "Pourpoint" meter. This device is a hand-held device that is held in the corner of the mouth. The fuel is initially drawn from the canister of the vehicle into a measuring chamber, and then through a measurement tube into the meter. The position of the mouth on the tube is varied and a read-out signal is indicated. A "good" reading on the read-out signal corresponds to a Diesel fuel that meets specifications. However, the accuracy of the "pour-point" readings is limited, is not very widely used, and is not very reliable. Other methods for determining the quality of fuel are based on measuring the parameters of a Diesel engine. These methods are complex and expensive. There is a need to develop a system and apparatus to evaluate the quality of a fuel with a view to reducing the cost of measuring the fuel quality, and improving the accuracy of measuring.Q: How to set default value in AngularJS for min="" attribute of type="number" I have HTML that looks like this If I had a select option with min set to 80000, the value 8
